

JIM ED BROWN

In Style Again

Features duets with Vince Gill,
The Whites and reunites
The Browns

Longtime fan favorite Jim Ed Brown returns with his first solo recording in three decades with the release of IN STYLE AGAIN, his debut project for Plowboy Records.

One of the most timeless voices in Country history, Brown has the distinction of having hits on the chart as a member of a trio (His recording partnership with sisters Maxine and Bonnie as The Browns earned them hits with "I Heard The Bluebirds Sing," "Scarlet Ribbons," and the 1959 million-selling "The Three Bells"), a solo artist (with hits like the iconic "Pop A Top," "Southern Loving," and "Morning"), and as part of a CMA Award winning partnership with Helen Cornelius (The two recorded many classics from 1976-1981, including "I Don't Want To Have To Marry You," and "Lying In Love With You").

IN STYLE AGAIN neatly brings together all phases of Brown's historic career. "When The Sun Says Hello To The Mountain" features the distinctive harmonies of his sisters. The album also features 12 solo performances from the singer. But when an artist as important as Jim Ed Brown steps into the recording studio, other artists naturally want to follow. He is joined on "Tried and True" and "You Again" by fellow Grand Ole Opry members Vince Gill and The Whites, respectively. He also reunites with Cornelius on the Carl and Pearl Butler chestnut "Don't Let Me Cross Over."

Brown is also familiar to audiences through his extensive work in television, with his Country Place syndicated series in the early 1970s, Nashville On The Road from 1975-1981, and You Can Be A Star and Going My Way from the 1980s. Brown was also the commercial spokesperson for Dollar General Stores for well over a decade. Since 1963, Brown has been a member of the Grand Ole Opry. His weekly radio show, Country Music Greats Radio Show, is heard on over 200 radio stations per week.
